DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farm is located on the north side of Landis Road at a sharp bend in the road about one mile west of White Hall Road southeast of Hagerstown in Washington County, Maryland. The house and barn stand on a rocky limestone ridge and face southeast.

The house is a two story, four bay limestone building with a one story shed roofed stone and frame enclosed porch. The stone end wall of the porch extends out from the main rear wall of the house and may have been part of an earlier extension to the house. The walls display roughly coursed stone work with some early inverted V pointing remaining. Flat arches of stone are present above the openings of the front elevation. In general, the masonry of the facade is more refined than that of the other elevation.

Windows and doors are aligned with each other in the walls but do not appear to be arranged symmetrically. Window frames are narrow, some with ogee molding, and hold two over two pane sashes which are replacements. Two pair of shutters with movable louvers remain in place.

The main entrance is located in the second bay from the east corner of the house. It shows evidence of alteration in the form of new stonework at the east jamb of the door. A Victorian period door and paneled jambs are present. A narrow transom remains above the door. A shed roofed porch now extends along most of the front elevation. It rests on high stone piers to accommodate the drop in ground level from the back to the front of the house.

The front slope of the roof is sheathed with standing seam sheet metal while the back part has newer channel groove sheet metal. Brick chimneys are located inside the end walls. They are topped with a series of corbeling.

Protruding through the end walls in the gables are tie rods secured with star shaped flanges.

East of the house is a large stone end bank barn with a brick-lined round tablet in its southwest end wall. Above it is another square tablet. Part of an early wood shingle roof remains on the barn. South of the house along Landis Road is a one and a half story outkitchen and possibly secondary dwelling. It is built into a steep slope being two stories in height at its road facade. Apparently another structure was once added to its north end wall where interior plaster and stove pipe openings can still be seen. A brick chimney extends from inside this end wall. Also in the complex is a stone smokehouse with a wood shingle hipped roof. The farm contains 109.85 acres.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This complex provides a notable illustration of the significance of limestone as part of the Washington County landscape and as a construction material. Set on a ridge laced with rock breaks is a stone house, a stone barn and several outbuildings also constructed of the native stone. Like most stone buildings in the area, they date from before 1850.

No actual construction date appears on these structures. However, they have characteristics which suggest that they may have been built during the early 19th century, possibly during the second quarter. According to the Washington County Land Records, this farm was part of the land purchased by Henry Landis from Samuel McCauley on December 22, 1832. It presumably remained in the Landis family through the 19th century being sold in 1913 by William H. Landis to George M. Kitzmiller (141/171). Kitzmiller owned the farm briefly selling it in 1915 to George M. Stouffer. It descended through the Stouffer family being sold in 1946 by Charles Stouffer to the present owner.

The house may have been built during the McCauley or Landis ownership. It should be noted, however, that Samuel McCauley owned a large amount of land in the vicinity including a Ca. 1800 brick house a short distance east of this complex. Presumably Landis Road got its name from the Henry Landis family, as did Landis Run which begins on the property.

Land grants included in the farm are "The Resurvey on Meshack's Garden," "Bond's Refusal" and "The Resurvey on Old Fox Deceived."
